

Edith Konrad

Die spektralen Formen der Schweizer Künstlerin Edith Konrad, die die Unterscheidung zwischen Figur und Boden verwischen, bewohnen dunkle und gedämpfte abstrakte Umgebungen, die von lebendigen Farbausbrüchen unterbrochen werden. In Kombinationen von Acryl auf Leinwand, Mischtechnik und Collage untersucht sie Linie, Farbe, Textur und die Eigenschaften von Acryl selbst. In einigen Werken sind traditionelle Techniken der Markierung und der Farbfeldmalerei zu erkennen, während Konrad in anderen die viszerale Unmittelbarkeit der Höhlenmalerei und der Malerei auf Stein bezieht. Ihre Szenen werden häufig von Farbschichten verdeckt.

Edith Konrad hat in zahlreichen Meisterkursen bei Künstlern aus Deutschland und Italien studiert. Sie malt zwischen der Linie von figürlich und abstrakt und verwendet hauptsächlich Acryl auf Leinwand, Collage und Mischtechnik. Konrad verwendet subtile, harmonische Farben und mehrschichtige Texturen, um eine außergewöhnliche Tiefe und Ausgewogenheit in ihren Bildern zu schaffen.

Ihre Werke wurden international ausgestellt, unter anderem auf Kunstmessen wie Montreux, Genf, Salzburg, Rotterdam, Marbella, Porto Ceresio, Los Angeles, Toronto und Paris. Im Jahr 2007 wurde ihre Kunst vom Staatlichen Museum Halifax, Nova Scotia, Kanada, erworben. Sie gewann den Palm Art Award 2009, ein Certificate of Excellence für herausragende künstlerische Qualität und Originalität des Werkes. Im Jahr 2010 stellte sie im Salon de la Culture im Louvre in Paris, Frankreich, aus.

Edith Konrad

Blurring the distinction between figure and ground, Swiss artist Edith Konrad's spectral forms inhabit dark and muted abstract environments punctuated by vivid bursts of color. In combinations of acrylic on canvas, mixed media, and collage, she studies line, color, texture, and the qualities of acrylic itself. In some works, traditional mark-making and color field painting techniques are evident, while in others Konrad references the visceral immediacy of cave painting and painting on stone. Her scenes are frequently obscured by layers of paint.

Edith Konrad has studied in numerous master classes with artists from Germany and Italy. She paints between the line of figurative and abstract and mostly uses acrylic on canvas, collage and mixed media. Konrad uses subtle, harmonious colors and layered textures to create an extraordinary depth and balance in her paintings. Her artworks have been exhibited internationally, including at art fairs such as Montreux, Geneva, Salzburg, Rotterdam, Marbella, Porto Ceresio, Los Angeles, Toronto and Paris. In 2007 her art was acquired by the State Museum Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada. She won the 2009 Palm Art Award, a Certificate of Excellence for outstanding artistic quality and originality of the work. In 2010 she exhibited at the Salon de la Culture at the Louvre in Paris, France.
