

Ross Tamlin

Ross Tamlin ist ein Künstler, der in Kyogle, New South Wales in Australien, lebt. Seine beschriebenen und gewellten Metallgemälde kombinieren traditionelle Kunst, die Genres des Stilllebens und Landschaft sowie die Grafik. Beeinflusst von der De Stijl-Bewegung repräsentieren diese Werke eine Synthese von Kunst und Funktion. Seine fotorealistischen Kompositionen sind durch Schichten von Farbe und Lack aufgebaut; miteingebunden ist stets die Ästhetik moderner industrieller Technik.

Farbe sowie industrielle Imagination und Objekte sind zentral in Ross Tamlins Kunst. Er ist speziell interessiert an der traditionellen Verwendung von gefundenen Objekten der modernen Kunst. Seine Kompositionen sind eine zeitgenössische Untersuchung von industriellen Materialien in denen er deren Zweck und Funktion rekonstruiert um neue Beziehungen zwischen dem Objekt und dem Betrachter zu erzeugen. Er arbeitet hauptsächlich mit leuchtenden Farben kombiniert mit Primärtönen und überlagert mit Text und Glasur um eine ganz eigene Version von Landschaft zu kreieren. Durch Text und Namen von bekannten Orten erarbeitet er die traditionelle Idee von Landschaftsbildern als eine moderne Interpretation neu. "Meine Idee war, das traditionellen australische Wellblech in ein modernes Kunstwerk zu transformieren.

Die Wellung in den Bildern ist eine visuelle Illusion die durch das Schichten von Farbe entsteht. Die meisten Leute können sich mit diesen Bildern identifizieren, da Wellblech etwas sehr familiäres ist, sowohl für die Städter als auch Leute aus dem australischen Busch. Dennoch steht das Gefühl etwas Traditionelles zu sehen im Widerspruch zur zeitgenössischen Beschilderung." Ross Tamlin lebt und arbeitet in Kyogle, New South Wales, Australia.

Ross Tamlin

Ross Tamlin was born in Auckland, New Zealand in 1958. He began a Fine Arts Certificate course at TAFE NSW Meadowbank in Meadowbank, Australia, and in Brisbane he completed a graphic arts course before returning to Sydney. His signature corrugated iron paintings combine traditional art genres including still-life and landscape along with graphic art. Influenced by the De Stijl movement, these paintings represent a synthesis of art and function. Incorporating the aesthetics of modern industrial technique, the corrugation in his photorealistic compositions is a visual illusion created by layers of paint and varnish. Color, along with industrial imagery and objects, are central in Tamlin's work. He is particularly interested in the traditional appropriation of found objects in modern art.

His compositions are a contemporary examination of industrial materials in which he reconstructs their purpose and function to reveal new relationships between the object and viewer. He works primarily in bright colors combined with primary hues overlaid with text and glazing to produce his version of a landscape. He reworks the traditional idea of landscape painting by incorporating text and familiar places names in a modern interpretation.

"My idea was to transmute traditional Australian corrugated iron into works of modern art. The corrugation in the painting is a visual illusion created by layers of paint. Most people can connect with these panels because corrugated iron is a familiar sight both in suburbia and the bush. However, the sense of seeing the traditional is contradicted by the contemporary signage."

Ross Tamlin's works are held in private collections worldwide, including Australia, New Zealand, United Kingdom, Hong Kong, Singapore, USA, Switzerland, and France. Corporate collections include: ING Bank, Babcock & Brown, Barclays Bank, Saville Hotel Group, Savills Property Group, Minter Ellison, Hai Win Shipping, Allkotes Pty Ltd, Blue Scope Steel Pty Ltd, Sieper & Co., A. P. Moller Maersk Group, Grant Thomas Management, Maridan Pty Ltd, Esprit Changeware Pty Ltd, Maritime Transport Ltd, London. Ross Tamlin lives and works in Kyogle, New South Wales, Australia.
